

Master of Science in Nursing

College of Natural Sciences, Department of Nursing

The Department of Nursing offers a hybrid online program leading to the Master of Science degree with a major in Nursing. Every student completes a series of core courses and selects from one of three concentrations/specializations: Advanced Community/Public Health Nursing, Population-Based Nursing, and Nurse Educator. Students choosing full-time plans of study typically complete the degree in two to two-and-one-half academic years.

Concentrations/Specializations

- The specialization in Advanced Community/Public Health prepares the graduate to deliver expert nursing care to community-based populations in positions in public health departments, home health agencies, and other community-based organizations.
- The Population-Based Nursing specialization prepares the graduate to apply a population-focused perspective in delivering expert nursing care in a wide range of clinical settings including hospitals, ambulatory settings, skilled nursing facilities, and more.
- The Nurse Educator specialization prepares the graduate for nurse educator positions in both academic and clinical settings.

The CSUSB Advantage

CSU San Bernardino is the only public university in the Inland Empire to offer a master's degree in nursing. The faculty are proud to play a part in educating the region's nurses for advanced nursing practice. Affordable tuition and a hybrid online/classroom delivery format, with theory courses delivered mostly online, make the Master of Science in Nursing degree at CSUSB an excellent value for working professionals.

For Further Information

- Visit the Department of Nursing website at www.cns.csusb.edu/nursing
- Email nursinginfo@csusb.edu nursinginfo@csusb.edu
- Call the Department of Nursing at 909.537.5380

The master's degree in nursing program at CSU San Bernardino is accredited by the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE).